

TEN PLEDGES TO END THE ANTISEMITISM CRISIS

1

Resolve outstanding cases

All outstanding and future cases should be brought to a swift conclusion under a fixed timescale.

2

Make the Party's disciplinary process independent

An independent provider should be used to process all complaints, to eradicate any risk of partisanship and factionalism.

3

Ensure transparency

Key affected parties to complaints, including Jewish representative bodies, should be given the right to regular, detailed case updates, on the understanding of confidentiality.

Prevent readmittance of prominent offenders

It should be made clear that prominent offenders who have left or been expelled from the party, such as Ken Livingstone and Jackie Walker, will never be readmitted to membership.

5

Provide no platform for bigotry

Any MPs, Peers, councillors, members or CLPs who support, campaign or provide a platform for people who have been suspended or expelled in the wake of antisemitic incidents should themselves be suspended from membership.

6

Adopt the international definition of antisemitism without qualification

The IHRA definition of antisemitism, with all its examples and clauses, and without any caveats, will be fully adopted by the party and used as the basis for considering antisemitism disciplinary cases.

7

Deliver an anti-racism education programme that has the buy-in of the Jewish community

The Jewish Labour Movement should be reengaged by the Party to lead on training about antisemitism.

8

Engagement with the Jewish community to be made via its main representative groups

Labour must engage with the Jewish community via its main representative groups, and not through fringe organisations and individuals.

9

Communicate with resolve

Bland, generic statements should give way to condemnation of specific harmful behaviours - and, where appropriate, condemnation of specific individuals.

10

Show leadership and take responsibility

The leader must personally take on the responsibility of ending Labour's antisemitism crisis.
